I was scooting on my belly under the brush, so Josh wouldn't see me. If I could reach the car before Josh found me, I'd win the game.

Josh was just a few feet away from me, and I could hear his footsteps heading straight for me. If I made any noise at all, he'd find me, and I'd be out of the game.

"I can hear you, Sandy. I'm going to find you," I heard Josh holler.

As I snaked toward the car, I made a wrong turn and was blocked by a solid wall of rock.

Quickly, I slid along the wall, looking for a way around it.

Off to my left, I could barely make out a dark line on the rock. I inched over to it, hoping it was a crack I could hide in. Josh would never find me there.

I'd wait for him to pass, and then I'd dash for the car before he could find me. I slithered over to the line.

Sure enough, it was a narrow crack in the rock. I planned to hide for a few seconds until Josh passed by, but then I saw something.

Wow! That was no simple crack in the rock. It was a secret entrance to an ancient room!

The rock walls were covered with strange drawings. I forgot all about the game and yelled "Hey, Josh! Come over here. Look what I found! This is so cool!"

"Awesome!" he gasped, as he squeezed through the crack. "They're petroglyphs, Sandy. Let's show Mom and Dad. Oh, and by the way—you're out. I win the game."
